According to certain tales, faeries leave the underworld once a year to join together in a faerie ring beneath the moonlight on All Hallows Eve. One time during this magical celebration, a faerie boy meets a human girl, and the two become friends. Here is their story...

What a delightful find! My 4.5-year-old preschooler loves all things faerie and when we came across this book at the library, I was immensely pleased! The story has an interesting premise - what if a child of faerie, which is refreshingly portrayed as a boy here, and a child of earth, a human girl, should meet and become friends? Well, each take turns visiting the others world, but when asked by the other to stay, i.e. the human girl is asked to remain in the fairy world, and the fairy boy is asked to remain in the human world, they each politely decline, for they are most comfortable in their natural environment. Will that spell the doom of their friendship? The ending is uplifting and heartwarming and sends out a clear message: whatever our differences, we can still be friends - friendship is a universal gift that transcends all boundaries. The illustrations are beautiful - both the fairy world and the human world. Highly recommended!

For More 5 Star Customer Reviews and Lowest Price:
Child of Faerie, Child of Earth by Jane Yolen - 5 Star Customer Reviews and Lowest Price!