Ami Chi is traveling to Vietnam, where the streets are crowded with scooters and the fruit are shaped like dragons and stars. Her parents still consider Vietnam home. But Ami Chi is confused. How can home be a place you’ve never been? She finds her answer in the green rice paddies that blanket the countryside, in the bustling Cho Lon market, and in the quiet rooms of her grandmother’s house. Vietnam may be nothing like America, but it feels strangely familiar. Before long, Ami Chi finds that you can travel very far and still find yourself at home.

My Personal Review:
Going Home, Coming Home is a bilingual English/Vietnamese storybook by Truong Tran about a family visiting Vietnam. The mother and father had to leave their home during the Vietnam War, but their young daughter has no memories of Vietnam and struggles to understand what it means to have a home one has never before visited. Ann Phong’s warm and colorful illustrations embellish this thoughtful tale of making new friends, learning new ways of doing things, and embracing the true meaning of "home" in more than one location.
