My Personal Review:
I bought this book (and the two others by the same author/artist), one set for my three-year-old grandson and one set for my 5-year-old granddaughter. But I have spent time with this/these books as well. They are appropriate for all ages because the older the child is, the more they will recognize. A very creative and artistic approach to creating what appears at first glance to be a common scene, only to find out, upon further inspection, that the entire scene is made with look-alike objects: are those bushes in front of the Taj Mahal, or brussel sprouts?! My adults friends were just as captivated by this/these books as the kids were.
