Turtle is in a big hurry. And that's hard for turtles to do. But he's off to see something red and he can't be late. But is it red like Rabbit's roses? Or Goat's socks? Or Fox's roof? All the neighbors want to know, so off they go in a long parade to follow Turtle. But when he finally stops, there's nothing red in sight. Until all at once they see red, red, red. Yet another trip into the inviting world of Valeri Gorbachev awaits young readers in this charming story. As the anticipation builds, so does the fun. And readers will be tickled—red—by the warm, rosy ending.

My Personal Review:
Superb, delightful story with fabulous illustrations. Makes a perfect birthday present or addition to a child's library. Over-joyed to discover this author/illustrator. Supremely talented. Beautiful story with a curious and wonderful suspense. HIGHLY RECOMMEND this as well as other books by same author. Bravo Mr. Gorbachev!
