My Personal Review:
The book is a slight paraphrase of a prayer from the Liturgy of Hours and from the Common Book of Prayer. This particular prayer is based on the prayer offered to the Lord by Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego in the Old Testament prophetic book of Daniel, after the Lord saved them from death in the fiery furnace.

Of course its the same over and over again -- its a liturgical prayer with a statement (to be read by the reader) and a response from the congregation. Anyway, by the fourth page, my 2 1/2 year old was saying the response along with me: praise Him and magnify Him forever in her own little lispy way. It was beautiful!

The illustrations are gorgeous. For example, on the page with O all you birds of the air, bless you the Lord: praise him, and magnify him forever, there is an illustration of teh sky with cranes flying. The author has added in small type o you cranes... yadda yadda. There are forests, pine trees, horses, eagles, elk, on and on.

I think it would be a wonderful addition to any family worship or prayer time in the evening. I can see how someone not accustomed to liturgy would find it repetitive and perhaps, boring. But if you understand what it is, I hope you might change your mind and decide it is not boring after all, but reverent, worshipful and honoring.
