When a little bird awakens to find that all of his friends and family have gone south for the winter, it takes a surprising friendship with Mooch the cat to help him find his way. This is a wordless and profoundly moving story--by the creator of the beloved comic strip Mutts--that explores being lost and found, crossing boundaries, saying goodbye, and broadening horizons.

My Personal Review:
I absolutely loved this book. The illustrations not only capture the beautiful essence of autumn changing into winter, but convey the entire story of a sad little lost bird. Mooch the cat (from the Mutts comics) takes the bird by the hand and helps him find his fellow birds who have flown south for the winter without him.

The watercolor illustrations are simple and charming. This book without words is more expressive than a lot of other books I know.

Also, if you love this book you will also love Patrick McDonnell's The Gift of Nothing (Special Edition) - another wonderful book about friendship.
