Interesting Lectures On The Topic Of 2012

Product Description	It began with the Mayan calendar—a startling astrological artifact that reaches its end point in the year 2012. As major spiritual traditions, independent researchers, and archaeological findings all point toward this date as a critical moment in human history, readers everywhere are starting to ask the same question: What will happen in 2012? For the first time, the leading authorities on the 2012 phenomenon are all given voice in a single book, now available in paperback: The Mystery of 2012. An invaluable resource for readers who want to learn more about this time of change, this fascinating book features essays from dozens of prominent thinkers, including: * Gregg Bradens examination of the scientific evidence for a shift in the earths magnetic field—and how it will affect all life * Barbara Marx Hubbards and Peter Russells explorations of the accelerating pace of evolution—why we may literally be transforming into a new species * John Major Jenkins journey to the source for answers: the original Mayan calendar * Ecologist Joanna Macy's vision of the Great Turning, and how we can take part in this shift to a life-sustaining culture * Daniel Pinchbeck on the meaning behind the rise in psychic phenomena as we approach 2012. Are we coming to the end of a cosmic cycle? Will there be an age of awakening, a new step in human evolution, or even an end to the world we know? For the growing audience of the 2012-curious, here is a thought-provoking and comprehensive exploration into the possibilities of this pivotal time.

Amazon Exclusive: Daniel Pinchbeck on 2012: The Truth Behind the Doomsday Hype

The Classical Maya developed a highly sophisticated civilization in the Yucatan and Guatemala that vanished 1,000 years ago. They were extraordinary architects and astronomers, and developed methods of timekeeping that are far more precise than our Western calendar system. Although we destroyed most of their scrolls, our archaeologists have discovered that the Maya looked toward the year 2012 – specifically the date December 21, 2012 – as the end of a Great Cycle of 5,125 years on their Long Count calendar. According to the Mayan creation myth, the Popol Vuh, such cycles end with the destruction of the old way of life and the inception of a new world. Many scholars agree that the Classic Maya pointed to this time, around the year 2012, as the juncture between one world age and the next.

As we approach the threshold, it becomes more and more difficult to escape the feeling that the Maya had mysterious foreknowledge about our time. We are currently in the throes of an ecological crisis, brought about by human activity, which threatens us with disaster if we do not immediately change our ways. Basic resources such as fuel, water, and food are becoming scarce around the world. Many scientists have predicted cataclysm due to climate change and pollution that could lead to the extinction of the human species in a short span of time. On the other hand, we are also experiencing a massive leap in human consciousness. Our world is now meshed together through communications technology and social networks that act as a global brain. We can transmit new ideas and transformative practices instantly across the world.

In my book, 2012: The Return of Quetzalcoatl, I proposed that what happens in 2012 depends on what humanity decides to make of it. We might see global famines and wars and increasing misery, or we might decide to institute a new planetary culture based on empathy, alternative economic systems, sustainable design, and an equitable sharing of wealth. According to the prophecies held by the Maya and other indigenous cultures, we may integrate modern scientific knowledge with Eastern spiritual wisdom and indigenous shamanism, leading to a new understanding of the physical and psychic cosmos. Rather than doomsday, 2012 could be a time of positive transformation and the opening to a new way of life.

Personal Review: The Mystery of 2012: Predictions, Prophecies, and Possibilities by John Jenkins

2012 is when the Mayan Calendar is said to end and many people think that we will experience a huge astronomical shift that will bring our planet into alignment, and because of this we will experience great change and transformation on our planet.

This book has essays on the subject by many New Age Teacher who have been speaking/teaching about this for some time: Jose Argulles, Gregg Braden, Jean Houston and many more.

We won't know for sure until the time comes, but there are many interesting ideas brought forth in this book, that make for fascinating reading.
