Another in the Abbevilles Tiny Folios series, this little book is a real gem. If you've never been to the Prado Museum in Madrid, you have been blissfully unaware of all you've been missing. One look at this survey of the collection, and you'll be scouring the papers for cheap fares to Spain. Known for housing some of the finest works by Goya, El Greco, and Velazquez, the scope and variety of work—Titian, Rubens, and Bosch to mention only a few—is amazing. Most of the works in the museum were either commissioned by the Spanish court or purchased by Spanish ambassadors. Treasures of the Prado is a testament to their fine taste and vision.

My Personal Review:
The Prado Museum is one of the greatest museums in the world, its holdings are amazing and the minute that you enter there you are overwhelmed. I suggest that everybody should visit at least once in a lifetime this institution.
